Dear Lin Tao,

How are you? I'm leaving this note to tell you that I have got the tickets for tomorrow's football match. The match will begin at 3 o'clock at Xinghua Stadium. I'll wait for you at our school gate at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. We'll go there by bike. It may rain tomorrow. You'd better take your raincoat with you.

By the way, we're going to play football after the match if it doesn't rain. Please put on your sports shoes if you want to join us.

Yours,
Wei Hua

(B) One possible version:

Sharing

It's very important to learn to share with each other in different ways. For example, I can share my beautiful pictures, favourite music, and even different ideas with others face to face or by Wechat and email, which are widely used today. Now I'd like to share one of my unforgettable experiences with you.

My classmate Emily was a shy girl. I hoped to cheer her up, so I shared my favourite books and chatted with her after class. As time went by, she got used to sharing her feelings with me. Now we're good friends.

In a word, sharing is not only interesting but also helpful, and it makes us grow up. We can learn a lot from sharing and enjoy our lives better.
