Georgia O'Keeffe was a great American artist. Before she became famous, she had one wish. She wanted her paintings to be different. Read this story about her. Did she get her wish?

Georgia always knew she wanted to paint. At first, she thought she painted like too many other artists. She wanted to paint other things—things that were in her mind and heart.

One day, when Georgia was young, she played a joke. The teacher asked why she drew everything so small. So Georgia drew one huge flower on a big piece of paper. It covered the whole paper. From then on Georgia decided to draw that way. She started painting huge flowers. She painted each flower on its own canvas (油画布).

Some people didn't understand Georgia's paintings. They wanted to see a bunch (束) of flowers. They didn't want to see just one big flower.

People asked why Georgia drew such huge flowers. She said, "If I draw regular-size flowers, no one will notice. If I draw a big flower, even very busy people must notice. Then maybe they'll really see the flower."

Georgia O'Keeffe became very famous. Today her flower paintings hang in many museums. Many people notice her big flowers and like them.
