scientists have worked out.

The air in the atmosphere is made up of dust and gases. More than three-fourths of the gas is nitrogen (氮气). Plants depend on nitrogen to stay alive. Most of the rest is made up of oxygen. Oxygen is needed for human and animal life. One percent of the atmosphere is made up of other gases. Included in this one percent are dust particles (微粒), ash from volcanoes and other bits of matter.

The gases and particles in the atmosphere are packed closer together near the ground. The farther up you go, the farther apart the gases and particles are. People who travel to the mountains find it harder to breathe the air. This is because the air is "thinner" and their lungs are not used to it. They have to work a little harder to get oxygen from this thin air. Usually, their lungs adjust quickly.

66—70: 根据短文内容, 回答下列问题。

66. How thick is the atmosphere?
67. What are the two ways the atmosphere protects the earth?
68. What gas makes up most of the atmosphere?
69. Where are gases and particles in the atmosphere packed closest together?
70. Why is it harder to breathe in the mountains?

D

On the Yellow Brick Road Dorothy meets the Scarecrow.

Scarecrow: Did I scare you?

Dorothy: No, no I—I just thought you hurt yourself.

Scarecrow: But I didn't scare you?

Dorothy: No, of course not.

Scarecrow: I didn't think so. Boo (呸)!

Scat (嘘)! Boo! You see, I can't even scare a crow (乌鸦). They come from miles around just to eat in my field and—and laugh in my face. Oh, I'm a failure, because I haven't got a brain!

Dorothy: Well, what would you do with a brain if you had one?

Scarecrow: Do? Why, if I had a brain I could ... I could while away (消磨) the hours, conferring (商议) with the flowers, consulting (咨询) with the rain.

Dorothy: Ohh! Wonderful! Why, if our scarecrow back in Kansas could do that, the crows would be scared to pieces!
